

Victor-Lucian GEORGESCU holds a PhD in Theology from the University of Bucharest with research on the theological function of Moses' discourse in Deuteronomy 4:1-40 within the historiography from Genesis to Kings. His main research interests revolve around the relationship between the narrative blocks that compose the Primary History (Gen – 2Kgs) and especially the central position that Deuteronomy has in this context. He is currently engaged in a postdoctoral studies program at the University of Bucharest, in partnership with biblical scholars from the Pontifical Biblical Institute in Rome. He also gives lectures on Old Testament & New Testament, as well as on Orthodox Christian Spirituality at Calea Victoriei Foundation in Bucharest.
