

Ovidiu PIETRĂREANU (PhD in Philology from the University of Bucharest) studied Arabic and Latin and is a lecturer at the Department of Oriental Languages and Literatures of the University of Bucharest, where he teaches courses in Arabic grammar, literature and the Arab pre-modern linguistic tradition for undergraduate students, as well as masters-level courses about linguistic interactions within the boundaries of the Islamic world and the Syriac language. He is also a member of the focus group for Biblical Hebrew at New Europe College. Pietrăreanu has authored papers dealing with Qur'anic studies, morpho-syntactic evolutions of Modern Standard Arabic, theoretical perspectives on the Arab philological tradition and the interaction between the Arab and Syriac literatures.